Ickes Irked As Body
Ignores Alaska As Haven For Refugees

By Jewish Telegraphic Agency

WASHINGTON—Secretary of Interior Harold L. Ickes charged that only a "dog in the manger" attitude prevented the opening of Alaska to refugees. He told newsmen that he planned to present his Alaskan colonization plan to the Inter-Governmental Committee.

"There isn't any reason," Ickes said, "why people can't live in Alaska and make a living there and build up a civilization in Alaska like that in Scandinavia. Private capital is available to establish such a colony. We have been able to call attention to the opportunity there, and some modification of existing quota and immigration laws is needed. This is not favoring people from foreign countries at the expense of Americans. Any American can pack his bag and put on his hat and go to Alaska tomorrow if he wants, but they haven't been doing it."

Pointing out that Alaska's population was now only 60,000 and that half of these were Eskimos, Ickes said: "It is a dog in the manger attitude to say we should save Alaska for our own people when our own people won't have anything to do with it." The Secretary said his plan contemplated adequate financing to overcome objections of the Alaskan civil authorities, who would not welcome indigent refugees.

Community Council
Asks For General
Jewish Council Seat

AKRON, O.—(Spl)—Disgruntled with the inactivity of the General Jewish Council, the East Central States Region of Jewish Welfare Funds and Federations meeting here Saturday and Sunday asked its parent body to seek a seat on the council and urged the Big Four to eliminate "duplication among its constituent executive organs" in two resolutions passed almost unanimously. The second resolution specifically demanded a radical departure in the functioning of the Big Four when it called for the institution of "a joint fund raising plan for civic defense purposes and for arriving at a proper formula for allocation of those funds" for 1940.

Heretofore each member of the Big Four has raised its own funds and carried out its own projects.

The ground for the resolution was laid when the executive committee meeting behind closed doors heard representatives of the American Jewish Committee, the American Jewish Congress, the B'nai B'rith Anti-Defamation League, and the Jewish Labor Committee apologize for the duplication and slow progress of the council. Later E. J. Schanfarber of Columbus, O., a member of the Big Four, told the open meeting that in his estimation the body should devise the policies to be pursued in defense of American Jewry, raise the necessary funds to prosecute this aim, and then allocate the tasks to the group best equipped to deal with them.

Mr. Schanfarber revealed that when this policy came up for a vote, the American Jewish Congress' five delegates voted for it, the American Jewish Committee voted five against, the Labor Committee voted four against and one for, and the B'nai B'rith voted three against and two for. Mr. Schanfarber said he saw no reason why this information should not be made public.

Many of the delegates were in a fighting mood in connection with the Big Four. The resolution to ask the Council of Jewish Federations and Welfare Funds, parent body of the East Central States Region, to seek a seat on the Big Four was explained by Jerome Curtis, chairman of the resolutions committee, as a move seeking to secure the enlargement of the General Jewish Council to provide for truly national representation of all Jews.

Another resolution passed took cognizance of the break-up in the solid front of unity in foreign relief agencies when it asked that "other organizations in the same fields" be included in a joint campaign such as the United Jewish Appeal. The resolution was aimed at the individual campaigns of the ORT, and the Federation of Polish Jews.

Elected to the incoming executive committee were Isidore Feibleman, Dr. C. W. Efromson, and Samuel Mueller of Indianapolis; G. Irving Latz and Lawrence Levy of Fort Wayne, and David Brazy and Will Welber of South Bend.

Washington Hears Jewish Children Expelled By Nazis

By Jewish Telegraphic Agency

WASHINGTON—Thousands of Jewish children, so young they are unable to give their or their parents' names, have been smuggled out of Germany into neutral countries by the Gestapo so that the Reich would have fewer mouths to feed, officers of the Intergovernmental Refugee Committee were informed.

Some of the children were orphans and others were children of persons imprisoned in concentration camps, according to documentary evidence presented to the committee. The expulsion practice has been so prevalent, it was said, that the Red Cross in neutral countries was forced to form special organizations to care for the children. The Gestapo's practice was to place the children aboard trains bound for the Netherlands, Switzerland and Belgium, three or four to each train.

Doctor Recommends Kraft's New Bread

Although introduced just a few weeks ago, sales of Kraft's Dandy White Bread, made with wheat germ flour, have been growing by leaps and bounds. On June 29 of this year Dr. Russel M. Wilder, Mayo Clinic physician, said: "If flour were fortified merely enough to restore to it the Vitamin B-1 content of the whole wheat, the entire group of bakery edibles would be converted overnight from products nutritionally poor in this vitamin to products rating as excellent."

The wheat germ is the richest natural form of Vitamin B. The wheat germ not only fortifies the bread with essential nutrients needed by the body but also gives it a finer flavor and more appetizing taste. You will find that Kraft's Dandy White Bread not only tastes better, but toasts better and stays fresh longer.

SCHRIEVER STUDIO:

I once knew a man who owned a Rolls-Royce. He had the faithful chariot for ten whole years, but still it was as good as new internally. The expensive and powerful motor hummed as it did the day he bought it, and he would have been satisfied except for one thing. The body was old, it was way out of date. It was bulky, bulgy and awkward. Well, he knew that an external going over would make his Rolls-Royce as good as new and so, he had a new body put on the ol' chassis and he had a new rumble buggy. The moral to the story? Just this. You too might be feeling fine on the inside but look like the Rolls on the outside. True, you can't exchange your body, but you can have it re-conditioned at

RICHARD SCHRIEVER'S studio. By scientific reducing methods these ugly bulges can be made to disappear and you can acquire a trim, sleek-like appearance. Why, the ol' man will never recognize the ol' chariot, no sirree. SCHRIEVER'S is located at 2702 North Pennsylvania street and the phone number is HA. 1143.

KEMPLER'S:

I've always thought that one item each individual has always wanted was a radio, be it little, wide, tall or slender. Honestly, as I sit here typing out this column and listening to a program of rhumba music over the radio, I can't imagine anyone being without one. We've urged you to go to KEMPLER'S many times for radio values that are really exceptional. Some of you have believed us, went in and came out with a new and beautiful receiver. Others just read, read, and read and do nothing about it. KEMPLER'S do have beautiful radios, all makes, all sizes and their prices are as low or lower than anyone's in town. KEMPLER'S are right in the neighborhood now, so drive or walk to College avenue and 34th street, where you'll find the best for less. Remember, "it is KEMPLER'S for a better deal."

THAELES SORORITY

SIGMA ALPHA MU

BLOOMINGTON, Ind.—Adding to the many laurels already heaped upon the chapter during the previous year, Sigma Zeta chapter of Sigma Alpha Mu holds the third highest scholarship rating among all fraternities on campus for the last school semester, according to the semi-annual report released early this week by university officials. Leading seventeen other fraternities, Sigma Alpha Mu was preceded only by the Sigma Alpha Epsilon and the Phi Kappa fraternities.

Amid a gay setting of festive decorations and soft music, approximately sixty-five couples will be entertained in the chapter house on Saturday evening, Oct. 28, at the Halloween sweater dance. Apple cider and doughnuts will be served. Fra Bob Berman is in charge of the dance.

Twenty-five fraters and alumni journeyed to Illinois last week end for the Indiana-Illinois football game. The fraters received the hospitality of Rho chapter of Sigma Alpha Mu and stayed at the beautiful Rho chapter house.

Plans are being rushed for the annual pledge formal dance, which will be held in the chapter house on the evening of December 2. Warpy Waterfall and his popular campus band will play at the dance.

Guests during the week included Rabbi Perley, head of the local Hillel Foundation, Mrs. Perley, and their guest.

Phi Beta Delta

Special BLOOMINGTON.—The eleventh anniversary celebration next Friday night of the founding of Alpha Theta Chapter of Phi Beta Delta on the I. U. Campus Nov. 3, 1928, coupled with the annual pledge dance next Saturday night, Nov. 4, will complete the weekend of week-ends for the host of brothers, pledges, alumni and friends of the chapter who will be guests of Phi Beta Delta.

The chapter volleyball team, led by Bernia Diamond, defeated the Kappa Alpha Psi aggregation by top heavy scores last Monday afternoon.

Diamond, senior wrestling manager, was in charge of the team for the wrestling match in Smithville last week. It was an exhibition match, first of the year for Coach Billy Thom's championship mat squad. Diamond also will accompany the team on its trips to various parts of the country this year. Bernie Kaufman is junior wrestling manager assisting Diamond.

Sid Gerstanhaber, freshman football star, is still on the sidelines with injuries suffered in rhinie scrimmage against the varsity squad, but he expects to be back in uniform in the next few days at the halfback position.

PEOPLE And PLACES

By
Seymour
Pinkus

How quickly time does fly. Once again Hallowe'en is here and it brings with it many childhood memories. As kids, d'ya recall the time you had, coaxing Mom and Pop out of a nickel for a blower and package of beans so that you could sting heck out of everything and everybody in the vicinity? And how about you guys who waited for the street car to stop and then pulled the trolley wire off the line? We used to arm ourselves with soap and set out to mark everyone's windows. I remember one merchant who fooled us. He gave his windows a coat of vaseline and try as we might, we couldn't leave a mark on the glass.

Say, while speaking of Hallowe'en, don't forget to attend the Harvest Moon dance at Beth-El Saturday night. I don't know much about the details, but we'll be there to find out what it's all about.

Junior Council's "Bum Rush" dance last Saturday was a rip-roaring success, yousah! Over 200 hoboes and their molls attended de clam bake, and was there a lot of goin's on. Lillian Weil was declared the worst dressed female bum and won for herself a new crisp one-dollar bill. Jack Maurer and Harry Hochman, both dressed so horribly, that the judges couldn't declare a winnah, and so, they split a half a slug between them. You know, I've really got to hand it to Jack. Ever since I can remember, he has responded most nobly when a costume ball of any kind was held and always appeared in appropriate attire. If every one entered into the spirit of an event in the manner in which he does, all of our affairs would be constant successes.

Some of the bums at the twist and twirl struggle were Joe Fogle, Helen Regen, Harry Einstandig, Hilda Larman of Terre Haute, Gabe Schuchman, Sylvia Maierson, Joe Caresky, Naomi Schneider, Sylvia Epstein, Bob Caresky, Jeanne Sacks, Phyllis Maierson, Irving Summerfield, Paul Sicanoff, Inda Larman, Stanley Larman, Harry Bolotin, Mark and Rosaline Klain, Gene and Ethyl Lazar, Mike and Goldie Sagalowsky, Sam and Fay Klezmer, Harry and Esther Klezmer, Meyer and Sadie Cohen, Alvin Cohen, Rosalie Levinson, Phil Hyman, Marjorie Goldsmith, Sally Roth, Amos Nahmias, Matt and Sam Kane, Dr. and Evelyn Klain, Milton Singer and his wife, Phyllis, of Greencastle; Betty Beitman and Jack Klein, Morrie Epstein and his wife, who along with Mr. and Mrs. Pinky Davis, are newlyweds, Edna Klezmer and Harold Marshall, Frieda Greenwald and Gene Kollinger of Dayton, and a whole army of others.

This Edna Klezmer sure gets around. After she told Harold she would go with him Saturday night she had four other bids to the shindig. That's o. k. lass, keep up the good work. Before the dance got under way, a large crowd celebrated Beverly Budnick's birthday with a dinner party at the Villa Nova. Many happy returns, Beverly.

Norm Weisman, wandering about the dance floor without a date, was suddenly bowled over by the appearance of a luscious creature whom he had never had the pleasure of gazing on before. The lass, Ruth Finegold of Chicago, made her entrance in a gorgeous red outfit and immediately wowed all the males present. Norm danced with her all evening and if some one would have come up to him and tapped him on the shoulder and asked where he was at that very minute, he probably would have answered, "Paradise, brother, Paradise."

Anyway, he thinks we don't know that he made a date with Ruth the next evening and continued where he left off the night before at the Indiana Roof. Other couples at the ballroom that night were Lillian Lenowitz, formerly of Nap town and now of Norwalk, Conn.; Gershe Levin, Isadore Dock and Shirley Shane, Roy and Doggie Leve, Al and Bess Gorinstein, Marian Berger and Joe Goldberg, Dave Davis, Dave Abraham, Ruth Blacksledge, Roe Becker, Molly and Adolph Frank, Izzy Sacks and a few others.

Gershe, we understand, has his eyes on a certain young miss up Michigan way, and his mind is always wandering to the land by the big blue water. Ducky Becker is also in love, I think with a local girl, but just try to learn her name, just try.

Evalyn Goldsmith is a pretty sad person these gloomy autumn days. Her steady, Dave Cohen, went to New York on business and will be gone more than a month. I'll just bet the epistles from one to the other fly back and forth faster than tracer bullets.

Ralph Berman of South Bend, who is a dental student here, made his radio debut the other day. He answered questions on one of these sidewalk programs and did a neat job, too.

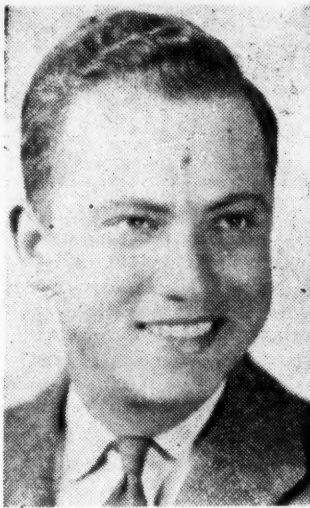

With all this subsidizing of football players going on in our colleges all over the country, it's a wonder that some of these teams, lacking a good punter, didn't try to sign Minnie the Mocher at the start of the current campaign. With her experience in "kicking the gong" around, she'd probably make All-American. Well, we'll see you at the dance Saturday night. Bye.

CABLES

The war has cut heavily into the sleeping time of the staffs of all Jewish organizations. . . . One of the things that is giving at least one staff a whopping headache is the matter of clearing cables to and from the various European offices. . . . The J. D. C., for example, has sent and received the extraordinarily heavy total of 350 cables since the war broke out, an average of about seven messages per diem. . . . Which almost puts it in the news agency class.

FOOD

Bismarck herrings go big with Danzigers. . . . But when the Hitler vogue began to take over, the herrings in some of the more fervent Nazi circles began to go under a new name. . . . An admirer of the nasty man strolled into a Polish restaurant in pre-war Danzig one day and asked the dumbfounded waiter for an order of "Hitler herrings." . . . The waiter asked the chief what it was all about. . . . "Take him," advised the knowing chef, "some Bismarck herrings—but cut the heads off."

BELLYACHE

When howling Hitler gets through gulping down Poland, political experts who are also culinary connoisseurs are saying he'll be in a position to write "Mein Krampf."

ARITHMETIC

The British humor mag Punch points out that if all the Jewish refugees who have accepted Germany's invitation to return were placed end to end in Hyde Park he would look conspicuous. . . . Or, Peter might amplify, you could put him in a nutshell.

SCOOP

One of the great fund-raising organizations performed a notable feat in the early days of the war. . . . It succeeded in getting a sizable chunk of accumulated collections out of a certain beleaguered Polish city before it was surrendered to the Nazis.

MISH-MASH

Have you heard the latest successor to "Bei Mir Bistu Schoen," which is being sung with a pure Galician accent by Duke Ellington, the popular colored band maestro? It's called "Ot Azio." . . . Sholem Asch's latest novel, "The Nazarene," the story of Jesus Christ, appears to be clicking with reviewers and public. . . . Sports Editor Morris (Mush) Weiner is going high hat. He has just finished a detective mystery called "Case of the Camera Eye," which he is hoping will click with the publishers. . . . Lipa Ruthenberg, whose name was brought into the Dies committee hearings recently, turns out to be a brother of the Palestine industrialist Pinchas Ruthenberg. Someone had testified that Lipa was "liquidated" by the Soviets after he had served several years as vice president of the Amtorg. Relatives here, however, revealed that Lipa was very much alive and active at Haifa, where he has been working for his brother's organization ever since he left Amtorg. . . . Henry W. (Hank) Levy has opened that American Jewish Committee office in Boston. . . . Variety, the theater mag, reports that the shofar (ram's horn) was not sounded in England on last Yom Kippur because it might have been mistaken for an air raid warning. . . . Eddie Cantor is kept busy these days denying the report that he will adopt his newly born grandson—the child of one of his five daughters—as his own son just so he can really experience the feeling of being father of a boy. Get set for a flood of new jokes about the Cantor girls. When Eddie got the news, he was doing a Shirley Temple impersonation in a Boston theater. He immediately announced it to the audience and got one of the biggest hands of his career. . . . Those Hitler-pig cards ("find the fifth pig") which are enjoying a huge sale all over the land are precipitating rows here and there that wind up in the police courts. Incidentally, the cards are a throwback to the days of the first World War—when the search was for the Kaiser instead of Hitler. . . . Here's a P. S. to that versatility note we gave you last week about Jeremiah Heschels, new J. T. A. employee. In addition to his manifold other talents, Jerry is an accomplished Talmudist and has qualified as a rabbi. . . . An interesting Americanization course that is being given for refugees in New York's continuation and evening schools is one in which they are taught how to take orders from women bosses—which is something that even American men need lots of instruction in. . . . Just about the handsomest editor in the Anglo-Jewish field dropped in on the boss the other day. He is Isadore Moscovitz, editor and publisher of the Southern Jewish Weekly of Jacksonville. The girls in the office were all aflutter about him for hours after he departed.

Rabbi Versus Laymen

In its sixty-fifth annual report, the Union of American Hebrew Congregations includes what is probably the most exhaustive and comprehensive discussion of the problem of restricting the rabbi's utterances and activities yet made public. The article, in its entirety, will appear in serial form. Taking part in the discussion are chairman, Rabbi Max C. Currick, of Erie, Pa., Rabbi Burnett R. Brickner, of Cleveland and Lester A. Jaffe, president of Rockdale Avenue Temple, Cincinnati, Ohio.

The Chairman: I want to ask Dr. Brickner to answer Mr. Jaffe's remarks.

Rabbi Brickner: If the thesis is granted that the rabbi is justified and has a moral right to speak out on social and economic questions, then it follows logically that glittering generalities are not enough. You must do more than simply state glittering generalities about social justice, righteousness, etc. You must complement these generalities, and make them concrete. They have to take shape in matters of social legislation.

Now, as to the type of legislation that they espouse as "half-baked," let me give you one instance of that "halfbaked" character. Mr. Jaffe didn't read from "The Social Outlook of Modern Judaism," by Cronbach, in which he records the fact that the seven-day week and the twelve-hour day, in the steel industry was regarded as inhumane by all the experts consulted, and even by President Harding, who implored the leaders in the steel industry to do something about this inhuman practice of a seven-day week and a 12-hour day in the steel industry. Experts said it couldn't be done and the vested interests in the steel industry said it couldn't—and mustn't be done. As a result of a conference which the late Horace Wolf, who was the chairman of the Social Justice Commission of the Conference of Rabbis, called in New York, the cooperation of the Catholics and the Protestants was secured and something very specific was done.

With reference to the state of collapse of our economic system, in what kind of a state is it? Eleven million people are unemployed in the United States, and democracy is vulnerable because it has failed to work on the economic and industrial scale. If we are going to save democracy in America, democracy must be made to work. People can't eat their liberty; there is enough bread for everyone, and some way has to be devised by which it should be more equitably distributed than it is today.

The present system was more or less condemned because it hasn't worked. The challenge of eleven million unemployed remains. The rabbis are against Communism and Fascism as a way of solving the problem. They state this very specifically, but they also suggest that the capitalistic system will collapse if it continues as it has. It has been suggested that it ought to be socialized; that our democracy should be not only a political democracy, but also an industrial democracy, and ways have been suggested for making that change.

Nowhere have rabbis said that they believe in the destruction of the capitalistic system. They say that the profit system has not worked out beneficially to all concerned. I realize that half of the people in this country live in families with an income far below that which the government regards as a decent minimum standard of living. The situation does exist.

For whom does the rabbi speak? The rabbi doesn't speak for his congregation; he speaks for what his conception of Judaism is, and he speaks through his congregation on behalf of Judaism.

The Chairman: The next question is, "Should the rabbi reflect the majority opinion of his congregation on social and economic issues?" And the second part is, "Should the rabbi consult with his board of trustees, with individual members of his congregation, before espousing some controversial cause?"

Mr. Jaffe: I don't believe that the rabbi should represent the majority opinion of his congregants on these matters any more than I believe the majority of the congregants should represent the opinion of the rabbi. Any rabbi who could only echo the thoughts of the prominent members of his congregation would not be a very big sort of person to have as a leader. If we restrict the rabbis' views and make them subservient to those of the dominant people in the congregation, we should not have great religious leaders.

As to the second part of the question, I certainly believe that the rabbi should consult with his board of trustees and also, if possible, with leading members of his congregation before espousing some controversial cause. In our congregation, Rockdale Avenue Temple, we have appointed a committee called the Committee on Public Relations. That committee is chairmaned by Murray Seasongood. On that committee are two rabbis, Dr. Philipson and Dr. Reichert. The members of that committee include such liberals as Dr. Cronbach, professor of social studies at the Hebrew Union College, and Rabbi Egelson, who represents the rabbinical point of view in congregational organization. That committee also includes some hard-headed business men, and when questions of social significance arise we discuss them thoroughly. Frequently the rabbis discover that their original reactions to questions were taken without full appreciation of all the factors involved.

I am not so sure that some similar arrangement might not be generally effective. I do not believe it is a wise thing for rabbis to jump into a fray without consulting their lay coworkers and partners. If you talk about freedom, it is true the rabbi has the freedom to do this if he wants to, but the layman, unfortunately, has the freedom to get out from the congregation if it is done. He has the freedom to day: "All right, go ahead and do it, but I'm not going to help." It is a kind of freedom that has liabilities in connection with it. I have the feeling that in all these matters the rabbi should consult with his board of trustees or with at least the leaders of that board if it happens to be a very large board.

Rabbi Brickner: Mr. Jaffe and I agree on the first question. On the matter of consultation, the question really is, whether consultation involves being bound by the majority opinion of those that you consult. It is understood that

The Editor's Chair:

Before we start off this week, let me ask you if you noticed carefully the front page picture last week showing the cutting of a B'nai B'rith birthday cake at the Washington (D. C.) Ladies' Auxiliary's first anniversary celebration? The caption with the picture, as it arrived in our office, read, "First Lady Cuts Cake," and then went on to say that Mrs. Roosevelt was shown in the act of cutting the cake while Henry Monsky, president, looks on. That may be so, and for a while we were inclined to agree, but after looking at the proof before The Jewish Post went to press, I decided that the lady in the picture was not Mrs. Roosevelt, and that the man behind her was not Henry Monsky. Maybe I was wrong, but in any event, I hastily changed the caption and the cut lines beneath the picture, leaving out the two names of the notables. Will Bernard Postal please explain?

The Indiana delegation certainly hogged the spotlight at the meeting last Saturday and Sunday in Akron, O., of the East Central States Region of the Jewish Welfare Funds and Federations, in conjunction with which was held the conference of the Midwest Section of the Jewish Welfare Board. The very first meeting, the executive committee meeting Saturday afternoon, saw Dr. C. W. Efromson, chairman of the Region, presiding and H. Joseph Hyman (the H stands for Hyman, and that's the truth) as secretary and treasurer. Then Allen Bloom took an important part in the discussions at the J. W. B. sessions. Saturday night, Isidore Feibleman, Sol Blumenthal and Julius Falender trooped in, and the next day Mr. Feibleman led the important meeting on the refugee situation, while Will Welber, of South Bend, took part in the discussions, as did Sol Blumenthal.

Indianapolis will probably get the 1940 meeting of both groups. The arrangement was not made definite because the Indianapolis delegation did not have authority to invite the groups at that time, but probably will ask for the sessions when the executive committees of the groups next meet.

It should be mentioned that Mr. Feibleman made a telling short answer when Rabbi Feuer of Toledo warned that the saturation point might soon be reached in giving by American Jewry. Mr. Feibleman pointed out that German Jewry was fined $400,000,000 in one fell swoop, and that we here have not even begun to sacrifice, much less give from capital resources at all.

The B'nai B'rith Greet The Anglo-Jewish Press

WITH publication of a manual called "How to Publicize the Activities of a B'nai B'rith Lodge," the B'nai B'rith becomes the first major organization in the history of United States Jewry to take cognizance of the importance of papers like The Jewish Post in local community life. Not only does the manual, excerpts from which are printed in the "Current Comment" section below, urge lodges to help the "local Jewish weekly in every possible way," but in addition, it declares that "lodge members should be encouraged to subscribe to the Jewish paper."

The manual goes all the way in consistency when it declares, "If the lodge has some function which it wants to advertise through paid advertising, give consideration to the claims of the Jewish weekly."

This manual, for whom Bernard Postal, B'nai

B'rith publicity director should get most credit, is another indication of the growing importance in Jewish life in the United States of the local weekly Jewish publication. Last week, the East Central States Conference of the Jewish Welfare Funds and Federations, meeting in Akron, passed a resolution thanking the Akron daily paper for its publicity, but ignored entirely the Anglo-Jewish press. This is perfectly proper and the region was well within its rights, but prior to the meeting and in the week since, publicity directors for the meeting have bombarded the Anglo-Jewish newspapers with an almost daily stream of news releases. The example of the B'nai B'rith should be a healthy one, not only for the East Central States Conference, but for other organizations, most of whom already are giving due credit to the Anglo-Jewish press.

Current Comment

The Modern View, of St. Louis, Compliments the Anti-Defamation League on Its Publicity Bulletin.—This week over a hundred thousand Jews in America, members of B'nai B'rith, are receiving a copy of The A. D. L. Review published by the Anti-Defamation League of that great force in Jewish life, the B'nai B'rith.

An informative, splendidly edited paper it is published for the first time so that Jews may know a small part of what is being done on their behalf. Those who have been fortunate enough to be in close touch with the work of the Anti-Defamation League know what a heroic task has been quietly performed without fanfare, without glory-seeking, without shouting from the rooftops.

However, many have felt that one of the defects of the League was in the fact that too few Jews knew what was being done. Many have yielded to defeatist thinking and despair, having no knowledge of the fact that one of the most intelligent defense organizations in the world was working day and night, fully cognizant of every problem besetting Jewish life. The A. D. L. Review is the answer. While it is a recognized fact that discussing everything that is done, in open forum often defeats the very purpose for which the League is formed, nevertheless the A. D. L. Review gives sufficient indication of the effectiveness of the Anti-Defamation League. Every Jew should read it.

St. Louis should be given credit for a great share of the credit which is due the Anti-Defamation League for this forward step. Samuel I. Sievers, representative of District No. 2 on the Anti-Defamation Commission of B'nai B'rith for many years was the prime mover in the plan to issue the A. D. L. paper. We are sure that the B'nai B'rith will receive a very good reaction from its publication. To Mr. Samuel I. Sievers, who seldom seeks the limelight, goes the satisfaction of seeing his idea carried into fruition.

The American Jewish Congress Bulletin Asks Cities to Organize to Further Congress Work.—What is needed, therefore, is a chain of local communal organizations working hand in hand with the national office.

The American Jewish Congress calls upon all Jewish communities in which there are resident a substantial number of Jews, to organize themselves for American Jewish Congress responsibilities. These branches are to act locally, just as the national office acts nationally, in the carrying out of the policies of the Congress, in defense, in educating Jews who do the work at hand.

The "Bulletin" is being sent to individuals in many communities in which there is no organized local branch of the American Jewish Congress. Let such readers of the "Bulletin" write to the American Jewish Congress for information and direction. Inquiries should be addressed to the Organization Department, American Jewish Congress, 330 West 42nd street, New York City, N. Y.

The B'nai B'rith Urges Cooperation With The Anglo-Jewish Press in a Manual on "How to Publicize The Activities of a B'nai B'rith Lodge."—The Jewish press in the community should not be overlooked when releasing publicity on civic and other activities of B'nai B'rith. It is bad public relations to slight the Jewish paper by permitting it to be scooped by the daily paper. Always remember that the Jewish paper is generally a weekly which appears on Friday and goes to press on Wednesday. If you intend to release a story for the daily papers on Friday or Sunday, give it to the Jewish paper on the preceding Tuesday, thus assuring it of an even break. Don't forget that the Jewish paper depends on Jewish news. If you, who make Jewish news, do not take the Jewish paper into account, you are doing your lodge a dis-service. The Jewish paper can be extremely helpful and is always ready to cooperate. Don't hesitate to take the editor into your confidence. Sometimes he may even be willing to handle the lodge's publicity.

All big cities and many smaller ones have one or more Jewish weeklies, which should be utilized to the utmost for local B'nai B'rith publicity. These publications reach a large proportion of Jewish families as well as the community's leaders. Most of their readers depend entirely upon the Jewish weeklies for news and information about Jewish happenings. Thus, these papers have an audience which includes many persons who are potential B'nai B'rith members. For most B'nai B'rith news of interest chiefly to the Jewish community in a metropolitan city, an effective publicity job can be done by using as media only the Jewish weekly and the lodge bulletin. Exceptions must be made, of course, for cities like New York, Chicago, Philadelphia and Boston, where even the best of the Jewish weeklies do not claim to reach the whole Jewish community.

It is to the best interests of every B'nai B'rith lodge to help the local Jewish weekly in every way possible. Lodge members should be encouraged to subscribe to the Jewish paper. If the lodge has some function which it wants to advertise through paid advertising, give consideration to the claims of the Jewish weekly. Invite the editor to address a lodge meeting. The better and more influential the Jewish weekly is, the broader is its audience and therefore the greater is the number of people reached by B'nai B'rith news published in the weekly.

In almost all cases the Jewish weekly can be courted on to cooperate in B'nai B'rith publicity. A list of Jewish weeklies in your State and District is available at the national publicity office.

Rabbi Ferdinand Isserman of St. Louis Tells of His Tenth Anniversary Service.—At my tenth anniversary service this coming Friday evening at Temple Israel, seven clergymen representing seven Protestant denominations, will participate in the service. Six of the clergymen will read the liturgy of the synagogue and take my place as the officiating clergymen in the Temple Israel pulpit. In so doing, they are not merely demonstrating their friendship for Jews, but their appreciation for Judaism and the ideals of the synagogue. Fifty or a hundred years ago such a demonstration of appreciation by teachers of Christianity of the worship of the synagogue would have been unheard of and impossible. In these days when we hear much of anti-semitism, let us not forget that our generation has had unusual experiences of Philo-semitism. For every vocal anti-semitic in America, there are fifty to one hundred clergymen who are friends of the Jews and of Judaism.

one is not to be bound but simply to be guided, then I absolutely agree. The rabbi is not infallible and he, as a rule, has a few people on the board—the officers and a few others—with whom he is in constant consultation and whose guidance he is seeking.
